Prevent Diabetes

Diabetes can be divided into two groups: Type 1 and Type 2

The metabolic syndrome, which mainly includes four health risk factors, is one of the greatest health threats in our affluent society. These include severe obesity, poor cholesterol, hypertension and type 2 diabetes mellitus. Together, these four individual factors are jointly responsible for coronary heart disease.

Not without reason is therefore often the "deadly quartet" the speech.

Type 2 diabetes mellitus is the most prevalent type of diabetes, with a share of 90 percent, mainly due to insulin deficiency and a reduced response to insulin (insulin resistance).

In contrast, type 1 is an autoimmune disease that destroys insulin-producing cells.

In addition, there are forms of diabetes that have genetic causes.

Healthy lifestyle

Prof. Dr. med. Roger Lehmann, from the University Hospital in Zurich, is mainly responsible for our bad lifestyle. "Many fast food products only lead to satiety in the short term, but hunger comes back quickly.

This reaction to "cravings" is absolutely harmful and promotes type 2 diabetes," explains Prof. Dr. med. Lehmann. Instead, it recommends two main meals, consisting of as natural as possible foods and plenty of vegetables and fruits. Above all, a lot of exercise is very important, especially for people who do a sedentary job. This awareness of a well-balanced, regular and healthy diet must be specifically promoted as a child, emphasizes Prof. Lehmann, adding: "It is important for children to be particularly enthusiastic about a sport that they really enjoy and that they enjoy thus exercise long and regularly.

The unrecognized illness

First of all, Prof. Lehmann considers regular provision very important. That is the only way to treat in time. Some symptoms include frequent urination and a strong thirst. In addition, there are often weakness, lack of performance and even blurred vision. Striking, especially in women, are infections in the genital area. After a clear diagnosis by the doctor, there are different forms of treatment, depending on the type of diabetes.

New therapy solutions

In very few cases there is the possibility to transplant insulin-producing cells. But there are also the usual problems to find sufficient and suitable donors. In the case of type 2, the research also tests various drugs that are supposed to improve resistance and insulin secretion. Also by research with stem cells as well as by beta cell replacement by pig cells one hopes further successes.

The best therapy still remains to opt for a healthy diet and exercise right from the start. This is fun and also creates more quality of life.

Tips:

Take regular precautions and have your blood tests checked.

Take care of a healthy diet. Eat more fresh salads, vegetables and fruits.

Only two main meals avoid weight gain.

Make sure you have enough exercise and exercise. Even small routes running is good.

Check your weight regularly to avoid being overweight.

Angeles City

Angeles City (Tagalog: Lungsod ng Angeles, Kapampangan: Ciudad ning Angeles) is a city on the Philippine island of Luzon. It is located approximately 80 (road) km northwest of the capital Manila on the North Luzon Expressway (NLEX, connection to Manila) and on the Subic-Clark-Tarlac Expressway (SCTEX, connection to Subic Bay in the southwest and Tarlac in the north).

Neighboring communities are Mabalacat in the north, Mexico in the east, San Fernando and Bacolor in the south and Porac in the south and west. Approximately 26 km west of Angeles City is the volcano Pinatubo, about 16 km east-northeast of the long-extinct volcano Mt. Arayat.

(Distances and directions refer to the central and well-known district of Balibago.) The district "Marisol Village" has since been renamed "Ninoy Aquino". Metro Angeles is the fourth largest of twelve metropolitan areas in the Philippines with 915,365 inhabitants (2007) on an area of 581.07 km.

History:

In 1796, the mayor of San Fernando, Don Angel Pantaleon de Miranda, together with his wife and some supporters, founded a new settlement, which got the name Kuliát because of the local wine. This settlement was initially a district (barrio) of San Fernando, until 1829 it was renamed and independent in Angeles. The city remained relatively small until the end of World War II, then the population increased sharply. During the Vietnam War, Clark Air Base was the main supply base in Southeast Asia. The US Air Force was still stationed in the city until 1991

Eruption of Pinatubo and effects:

On June 15, 1991, around 900 people were killed in an eruption of the Pinatubo volcano and a quarter of a million people lost their homes. The US Army then cleared both the base in Angeles City as well as the Subic Bay. The soldiers stationed there left the country.

The Philippine Senate did not extend the 1991 expired leases (military base agreements) with the United States then. The economy of Angeles City was weakened in the long term by the infrastructure destruction and the lack of economic power of the military base.

Current situation:

The former Air Base has been converted into an economic zone; the airfield became the Clark International Airport, which was named after Diosdado Macapagal in the meantime.

Tourism is on the rise again, although both prices and crime rates are very high.

Entertainment district:

In addition to the so-called Jeepneys and countless fast food restaurants, the Americans in Angeles City have left a huge entertainment district especially in the districts of Malabánas and Balibago. On Fields Avenue, gogo bars, pubs, beer gardens and hotels line each other for about 2 km. The biggest boom was in 1992, when Manila's governing mayor closed all bars in the Ermita entertainment district. These partially moved to the 80 miles away Angeles City. The crime is high. It is estimated that more than 30,000 women work in the city's clubs and bars. The former US Air Force Base "Clark Air Base" has been converted into an economy zone. The "Clark International Airport" produced more than 1,500,000 passengers in 2017.

Subic Watershed Forest Reserve:

The Subic Watershed Forest Reserve is located in the northwest of the province of Bataan and in the south of Zambales province on the island of Luzon in the Philippines. It covers an area of 6,261 hectares, from the northwest slopes of Mount Natib to Subic Bay. It originated with the entry into force of Republic Law 7227 in 1992. The reserve is adjacent to the Subic Bay Freeport Zone in the northwest and was part of the United States Naval Base Subic Bay until the departure of the US Navy. In the southeast, the Bataan National Park joins and it belongs to the Zambales biosphere zone. The Subic Watershed Forest Reserve is located in a varied natural setting that includes grass savannahs and evergreen lowland rainforests. The forest areas of the nature reserve and the surrounding areas comprise approximately 9,800 hectares, in which a total of 745 different plant species were found through investigations. In the peripheral areas of the nature reserve there are agricultural areas that alternate with built-up areas.

However, the forests are under serious threat from slash-and-burn and illegal logging. The eruption of Pinatubo in the north in 1991 caused lasting damage to the forests in the national park. The reserve provides habitat for the endemic giant bark rats (Phloeomys pallidus) in the Philippines, the gold crown flying fox (Acerodon jubatus), the Philippine deer (Cervus mariannus) and the Philippine pestle (Sus philippensis).

Noteworthy among the avifauna are the Philippine duck (Anas luzonica), the Philippine hooded eagle (Nisaetus philippensis), the red-crowned cockatoo (Cacatua haematuropygia), the Luzon-winged parrot (Prioniturus luconensis), the striped bay (Bubo philippensis), and the Manila parrot damselfly (Erythrura viridifacies).

CROSSWORD

You should Remember these Wisdom Sayings

The work plays a crucial role in our personal fulfillment of life, our happiness in life and our contentment.

The profession is also an important factor in our own meaning of life. After all, we spend most of our lives working, much more than with the family or partner. According to a Gallup study, every fourth German is acutely dissatisfied with his job.

Above all, many younger Generation Y employees lack freedom and creative freedom, they want to implement their own ideas and realize themselves.

But even those who have climbed the ladder, seem successful to the outside, may inwardly realize that it is not really what he wanted to do.

That is why many employees and managers, for a long time career, money and status as the highest standards, felt in the middle of life increasingly yearning for a fulfilling and meaningful task. The profession becomes a vocation if we can develop our own talents and develop the inherent potential.

Love sayings for every Day

So many hearts are on earth, so many hearts love you, but of all these many hearts, none loves you like me.

Love is ... waking up to find that the night was not a dream.

Nearby, but also in the distance,
my little heart thinks of you.
It loves you so much and loves you immensely.
Does that think of you too?

For the world, you are only someone, but for somebody, you are the whole world.

Never forget someone you've ever loved. But never love someone who has forgotten you!

Love is a great disease - there are always two in bed.

You give me warmth and energy, you are the sun in my galaxy.

Love is not just a word. Love is the feeling of being needed by someone who feels the same way.

A life without love is a lost life.
